THE GEORGIA MILESTONES ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

The purpose of the Georgia Student Assessment Program is to measure student achievement of the state-adopted content standards and inform efforts to improve teaching and learning. Results of the assessment program are utilized to identify students failing to achieve mastery of content, to provide educators with feedback about instructional practice, and to assist school districts in identifying strengths and weaknesses in order to establish priorities in planning educational programs.

The State Board of Education is required by Georgia law (O.C.G.A. §20-2-281) to adopt assessments designed to measure student achievement relative to the knowledge and skills set forth in the state-adopted content standards. The Georgia Milestones Assessment System (Georgia Milestones) fulfills this requirement and, as a key component of Georgia’s Student Assessment Program, is a comprehensive summative assessment program spanning grade 3 through high school. Georgia Milestones measures how well students have learned the knowledge and skills outlined in the state-adopted content standards in Language Arts, Mathematics, Science, and Social Studies. Students in grades 3 through 8 take an end-of-grade assessment in English Language Arts and Mathematics; additionally, students in grades 5 and 8 are assessed in Science; and students in grade 8 are assessed in Social Studies. High school students take an end-of-course assessment for each of the five courses designated by the State Board of Education. In accordance with State Board Rule, Georgia Milestones end-of-course measures serve as the final exams for the specified high school courses.

The main purpose of Georgia Milestones is to inform efforts to improve student achievement by assessing student performance on the standards specific to each course or subject/grade tested. Specifically, Georgia Milestones is designed to provide students and their parents with critical information about the students’ achievement and, importantly, their preparedness for the next educational level. The assessment system is a critical informant of the state’s accountability measure, the College and Career Ready Performance Index (CCRPI), providing an important gauge about the quality of the educational services and opportunities provided throughout the state. The ultimate goal of Georgia’s assessment and accountability system is to ensure that all students are provided the opportunity to engage with high-quality content standards, receive high-quality instruction predicated upon those standards, and are positioned to meet high academic expectations.

Features of the Georgia Milestones Assessment System include:

- technology-enhanced items in all grades and courses;
- open-ended (constructed-response) items in English Language Arts (all grades and courses);
- a writing component (in response to passages read by students) at every grade level and course within the English Language Arts assessment; and
- online administration as the primary mode of administration.
The mode of administration for the Georgia Milestones program is online. Paper/pencil test materials, such as Braille forms, will be available for the small number of students who cannot interact with the computer due to their disability as documented in an IEP, IAP/504, or EL-TPC Plan.

Georgia Milestones follows guiding principles to help ensure that the assessment system:

- is sufficiently challenging to ensure Georgia students are well positioned to compete with other students across the United States and internationally;
- is intentionally designed across grade levels to send a clear signal of student academic progress and preparedness for the next level, whether it is the next grade level, course, or college or career;
- is accessible to all students, including those with disabilities or limited English proficiency, at all achievement levels;
- supports and informs the state’s educator-effectiveness initiatives, ensuring items and forms are appropriately sensitive to quality instructional practices; and
- includes innovative technology-enhanced items.

GEORGIA MILESTONES END-OF-COURSE (EOC) ASSESSMENTS

As previously mentioned, Georgia law (§20-2-281) mandates that the State Board of Education adopt EOC assessments for core courses to be determined by the Board. An EOC assessment serves as a student’s final exam in the associated course. With educator input and State Board approval, the Georgia Milestones EOC assessments measure student achievement in the following courses: American Literature and Composition, Algebra I, Coordinate Algebra, Biology, and United States History.

Any student enrolled in and/or receiving credit for one of the above-mentioned courses, regardless of grade level, is required to take the Georgia Milestones EOC assessment upon completion of that course. This includes middle school students completing a course associated with a Georgia Milestones EOC assessment, regardless of whether they are receiving high school credit. Students enrolling from non-accredited programs are required to take and pass the Georgia Milestones EOC assessment prior to receiving credit for the course.

A student’s final grade in the course will be calculated using the Georgia Milestones EOC assessment as follows (State Board Rule 160-4-2-.13):

- For students enrolled in Grade 9 for the first time before July 1, 2011, the EOC assessment counts as 15% of the final grade.
- For students enrolled in Grade 9 for the first time on or after July 1, 2011, the EOC assessment counts as 20% of the final grade.

Results of the EOC assessments, according to the legislated and identified purposes, must:

- provide a valid measure of student achievement of the state content standards across the full achievement continuum;
- serve as the final exam for each course, contributing 15% or 20% to the student’s final course grade;
- provide a clear signal of each student’s preparedness for the next course and ultimately post-secondary endeavors (college and career);
- allow for the detection of the academic progress made by each student from one assessed course to the next;
- support and inform educator-effectiveness measures; and
- inform state and federal accountability measures at the school, district, and state levels.
Additional uses of the EOC assessments include: (1) certifying student proficiency prior to the awarding of credit for students enrolling from non-accredited private schools, home study programs, or other non-traditional educational centers and (2) allowing eligible students to demonstrate competency without taking the course and earn course credit (e.g., “test out”). In both cases, students are allotted one administration.

ASSESSMENT GUIDE

The Georgia Milestones American Literature and Composition EOC Assessment Guide is provided to acquaint Georgia educators and other stakeholders with the structure of and content assessed by the test. Importantly, this guide is not intended to inform instructional planning. It is essential to note that there are a small number of content standards that are better suited for classroom or individual assessment than for large-scale summative assessment. While those standards are not included in the tests and therefore are not included in this Assessment Guide, the knowledge, concepts, and skills inherent in those standards are often required for the mastery of the standards that are assessed. Failure to attend to all content standards within a course can limit a student’s opportunity to learn and show what he or she knows and can do on the assessment.

The Georgia Milestones American Literature and Composition EOC Assessment Guide is in no way intended to substitute for the state-mandated content standards; it is provided to help educators better understand the structure and content of the assessment, but it is not all-encompassing of the knowledge, concepts, and skills covered in the course or assessed on the test. The state-adopted content standards and associated standards-based instructional resources, such as the Content Frameworks, should be used to plan instruction. This Assessment Guide can serve as a supplement to those resources, in addition to any locally developed resources, but should not be used in isolation. In principle, the Assessment Guide is intended to be descriptive of the assessment program and should not be considered all-inclusive. The state-adopted content standards are located at www.georgiastandards.org.
The Georgia Milestones American Literature and Composition EOC assessment is offered during three Main Administrations. Main Administrations are primarily intended to provide an opportunity to assess student achievement at the completion of a course and to serve as the final exam for the associated course as required by State Board Rule. As a result, the EOC assessment should occur as close to the conclusion of the course as possible. Main Administrations can also be utilized to verify credit from a non-accredited school or home schooling. In addition to the Main Administrations, Mid-Month Administrations are provided in order to allow students additional testing opportunities for the various reasons noted below.

TEST STRUCTURE

DESCRIPTION OF TEST FORMAT AND ORGANIZATION

The Georgia Milestones American Literature and Composition EOC assessment is primarily a criterion-referenced test designed to provide information about how well a student has mastered the state-adopted content standards within the course. The assessment consists of both operational items and field test items (newly written items that are being tried out and do not contribute to the student’s score). Each student will receive one of four Achievement Level designations, depending on how well the student has mastered the content standards. The four Achievement Level designations are Beginning Learner, Developing Learner, Proficient Learner, and Distinguished Learner. In addition to criterion-referenced information, the Georgia Milestones measures will also produce an estimate of how Georgia students are achieving relative to their peers nationally. The norm-referenced information provided is supplementary to the criterion-referenced Achievement Level designation and will not be utilized in any manner other than to serve as a barometer of national comparison. Only the criterion-referenced scores and Achievement Level designations will be utilized in the accountability metrics associated with the assessment program (such as student growth measures, educator-effectiveness measures, or the CCRPI).

The table on the following page outlines the number and types of items included on the American Literature and Composition EOC assessment.

<sup>1</sup><sub>Technology-Enhanced</sub>: Possible variants of the technology-enhanced item types used for American Literature and Composition include evidence-based selected-response, drag-and-drop, and drop-down.

<sup>3</sup><sub>Field Test Items</sub>: Field test items may include 1-point selected-response, 1-point technology-enhanced, 2-point evidence-based selected-response, 2-point technology-enhanced, and 4-point extended constructed-response items.

<sup>4</sup><sub>Total</sub>: Of the total 51 items, 45 contribute to the student’s American Literature and Composition score.

The test will be given in three sections. Students will be given a maximum of 90 minutes to complete Section 1, which includes the extended writing-response. Students may have up to 80 minutes per section to complete Sections 2 and 3. The total estimated testing time for the American Literature and Composition EOC assessment ranges from approximately 125 to 250 minutes. Total testing time describes the amount of time students have to complete the assessment. It does not take into account the time required for the test examiner to complete pre-administration and post-administration activities (such as reading the standardized directions to students). Section 1, which focuses on writing, must be administered on a separate day. Sections 2 and 3 may be administered on the same day or across two consecutive days based on the district’s testing protocols for the EOC measures (in keeping with state guidance).

CONTENT MEASURED

The American Literature and Composition EOC assessment will measure the American Literature and Composition standards that are described at www.georgiastandards.org.

The content of the assessment is organized into two groupings, or domains, of standards for the purposes of providing feedback on student performance. A content domain is a reporting category that broadly describes and defines the content of the course, as measured by the EOC assessment. The standards for American Literature and Composition are grouped into two domains: Reading and Vocabulary, and Writing and Language. Each domain was created by organizing standards that share similar content characteristics. The content standards describe the level of expertise that American Literature and Composition educators should strive to develop in their students. Educators should refer to the content standards for a full understanding of the knowledge, concepts, and skills that may be assessed on the EOC assessment.
The approximate proportional number of points associated with each domain is shown in the following table. A range of cognitive levels will be represented on the American Literature and Composition EOC assessment. Educators should always use the content standards when planning instruction.

ITEM TYPES

A selected-response item, sometimes called a multiple-choice item, is defined as a question, problem, or statement that appears on a test followed by several answer choices, sometimes called options or response choices. The incorrect choices, called distractors, usually reflect common errors. The student’s task is to choose, from the alternatives provided, the best answer to the question posed in the stem (the question). The American Literature and Composition selected-response items will have four answer choices.

A technology-enhanced item is an innovative way to measure student skills and knowledge by using scaffolding within a multi-step process. Technology-enhanced items are worth one or two points. If the item is worth two points, partial credit is awarded for special combinations of responses that do not include all the correct answers. For American Literature and Composition, there are a number of specific technology-enhanced item types being used:

- In Evidence-Based Selected-Response (EBSR) items, the student responds to a two-part question. In the first part, the student responds to an inferential or key concept question related to a stimulus text. In the second part, the student provides evidence from the same text to support the inference or idea. In both parts of an EBSR item, the student selects the responses from the choices provided. There is one correct answer for each part of an EBSR item. If the student responds correctly to both parts of the EBSR item, the student receives two points. Partial credit may be awarded when a student answers the first part correctly.

- In drag-and-drop items, the student can show language, writing, research, or comprehension skills by organizing or sequencing information into a table or simple graphic. The student uses a mouse, touchpad, or touchscreen to move responses to designated areas on the screen.

- In drop-down menu items, the student reads a stimulus text with two to four drop-down menus embedded in the text. The student uses a mouse, touchpad, or touchscreen to open each drop-down menu and select the correct answer from the drop-down options. Each drop-down menu will include two to four options.

- Since some technology-enhanced items in this guide were designed to be used only in an online, interactive-delivery format, some of the item-level directions will not appear to be applicable when working within the format presented in this document (for example, “Move the descriptions onto the lines of the paragraph” or “Click To Respond”).

- This icon identifies special directions that will help the student answer technology-enhanced items as shown in the format presented within this guide. These directions do not appear in the online version of the test but explain information about how the item works that would be easily identifiable if the student were completing the item in an online environment.

To give students practice using technology-enhanced items in an online environment very similar to how they will appear on the online test, visit “Experience Online Testing Georgia.”

Test Structure

Please note that Google Chrome is the only supported browser for this public version of the online testing environment.

A constructed-response item asks a question and solicits the student to provide a response he or she constructs on his or her own, as opposed to selecting from options provided. The constructed-response items on the EOC assessments will be worth two points. Partial credit may be awarded if part of the response is appropriate based upon the prompt and the rubric.

An extended constructed-response item is a specific type of constructed-response item that elicits a longer, more detailed response from the student than a two-point constructed-response item. The stimulus used for this type of item may be a literary or informational passage or a paired passage set. A paired passage set may consist of two literary passages, two informational passages, or one of each passage type. The extended constructed-response items on the EOC assessments will be worth four points. For American Literature and Composition, the student will respond to a narrative prompt based on a passage the student has read, and the response will be scored according to the Writing and Language domain. Partial credit may be awarded if part of the response is appropriate based upon the prompt and the rubric.

The extended writing-response items require the student to produce an argument or develop an informative or explanatory response. As part of the extended writing task, students must first read two passages and then respond to three multiple-choice items and one constructed-response item. All of these items help students write their extended essay by focusing them on the main idea(s) and key details in the passages. Two of the selected-response items will address each of the passages separately. One selected-response item and the constructed-response item will address both of the passages together. All three selected-response items and the constructed-response item contribute to the Reading and Vocabulary domain. These items will be followed by an extended writing-prompt, which requires the student to draw from the reading experience when writing an essay response and to cite evidence from the passage(s) to support claims and conclusions in the essay. The writing task is worth seven points that contribute to the Writing and Language domain.

DEPTH OF KNOWLEDGE DESCRIPTORS

Items found on the Georgia Milestones assessments, including the American Literature and Composition EOC assessment, are developed with a particular emphasis on cognitive complexity or Depth of Knowledge (DOK). DOK is measured on a scale of 1 to 4 and refers to the level of cognitive demand required to complete a task (or in this case, an assessment item). The higher the level, the more complex the item; however, higher levels do not necessarily mean more difficult items. For instance, a question can have a low DOK but a medium or even high difficulty level. Conversely, a DOK 4 question may have a low difficulty level but still require a great deal of cognitive thinking (e.g., analyzing and synthesizing information instead of just recalling it). The following descriptions and table show the expectations of the four DOK levels in greater detail.

Level 1 (Recall of Information) generally requires students to identify, list, or define, often asking them to recall who, what, when, and where. Consequently, this level usually asks students to recall facts, terms, concepts, and trends and may ask them to identify specific information contained in documents, excerpts, quotations, maps, charts, tables, graphs, or illustrations. Items that require students to “describe” and/or “explain” could be classified at Level 1 or Level 2, depending on what is to be described and/or explained. A Level 1 “describe” and/or “explain” would require students to recall, recite, or reproduce information.

Level 2 (Basic Reasoning) includes the engagement of some mental processing beyond recalling or reproducing a response. A Level 2 “describe” and/or “explain” would require students to go beyond a description or explanation of recalled information to describe and/or explain a result or “how” or “why.”
Level 3 (Complex Reasoning) requires reasoning, using evidence, and thinking on a higher and more abstract level than Level 1 and Level 2. Students will go beyond explaining or describing “how and why” to justifying the “how and why” through application and evidence. Level 3 questions often involve making connections across time and place to explain a concept or “big idea.”

Level 4 (Extended Reasoning) requires the complex reasoning of Level 3 with the addition of planning, investigating, applying significant conceptual understanding, and/or developing that will most likely require an extended period of time. Students should be required to connect and relate ideas and concepts within the content area or among content areas in order to be at this highest level. The distinguishing factor for Level 4 would be a show of evidence (through a task, a product, or an extended response) that the cognitive demands have been met.

The following table identifies skills that students will need to demonstrate at each DOK level, along with question cues appropriate for each level.

Scores

Selected-response items and technology-enhanced items are machine scored. However, the American Literature and Composition EOC assessment consists of a variety of item types that contribute to the student’s score, including selected-response, technology-enhanced, constructed-response, extended constructed-response, and extended writing-response. Items that are not machine scored—i.e., constructed-response, extended constructed-response, and extended writing-response items—require rubrics for manual scoring.

Students will receive a scale score and an Achievement Level designation based on total test performance. In addition, students will receive information on how well they performed at the domain level. For more information on scoring, please see the Georgia Milestones End-of-Course (EOC) Interpretive Guide for Score Reports.

A Biography of James Dickey

1. One of the most highly regarded twentieth-century poets, James Dickey was perhaps best known for his 1970 novel, Deliverance. A writer, a critic, a lecturer, and a teacher, Dickey was described by the New York Times as a “big, sprawling, life-loving man.”

2. A Georgia native, Dickey was born in 1923 in Atlanta, where he spent his childhood. He enrolled in Clemson University in 1942 but dropped out just a few months later to join the Army Air Corps. His early experiences as a navigator—flying over 100 missions in the Pacific during World War II—ultimately would provide rich fodder for many of his poems, including one of his most famous, “The Firebombing.”

3. Upon returning from the war, Dickey completed his undergraduate degree and earned a master’s degree in English at Vanderbilt University. While at Vanderbilt, Dickey tried his hand at poetry and had several poems published in the university’s literary magazine. After college, he married Maxine Syerson. In 1950, they moved to Houston, Texas, where he began teaching English at Rice University. After just a couple of years at Rice, Dickey was recalled to active duty by the military when the Korean War began. During his service, Dickey sold his first poem, “The Shark at the Window,” to the Sewanee Review.

4. Dickey returned to Rice after completing his military service and then moved on to the University of Florida, but he found it difficult to make ends meet on his teacher’s salary. He left teaching behind for the more lucrative advertising business and moved to Manhattan to work as a copywriter. Dickey was a success, and for five years he worked for agencies in New York and Atlanta, but he found he had little time left to devote to his poetry. He also felt guilty about his work, viewing advertising as a form of corruption. “I knew how to manipulate those poor sheep, but the fact I felt that way about them was an indication of my own corruption,” he said.

5. Dickey finally left advertising behind and, after a year in Italy, he spent the next few years as “poet in residence” at several universities and published two volumes of poetry and a selection of critical essays. Dickey’s poetry from this time is known for “a mixture of lyricism and narrative,” as Richard Stull wrote in Modern American Poetry. Dickey often focused on everyday subjects, from his wartime experiences to animals to football players. In 1966, his collection of poems titled Buckdancer’s Choice, which contained “The Firebombing,” was awarded the prestigious National Book Award for Poetry.
6 In 1967, Dickey was named the consultant in poetry to the Library of Congress—the equivalent of what is now the poet laureate—and while there he was known for his strong, outspoken opinions. The following year he was hired by the University of South Carolina, where he remained on the faculty until his death in 1997.

7 While at the university, Dickey was viewed as a popular and inspirational teacher but was almost as well-known for his outrageous behavior. Poetry was always Dickey’s first love, but the publication of Deliverance, the gripping story of four Atlanta businessmen on a weekend canoe trip that ends in disaster, brought Dickey a degree of acclamation not usually experienced by poets. The subsequent Hollywood movie based on the novel, for which Dickey wrote the screenplay, made him a household name.

8 The book’s success was a turning point for Dickey, according to The New Georgia Encyclopedia. Dickey’s poetry in the years after became “more experimental and abstract, less spontaneous and effective.” While he continued to teach and write, he never was able to attain the same sort of success or critical praise for his work.

Standard: ELAGSE11-12RI3. Analyze a complex set of ideas or sequence of events and explain how specific individuals, ideas, or events interact and develop over the course of the text.

What did Dickey’s varied careers generally have in common?

A. His careers left him unhappy.
B. His careers involved writing.
C. His careers made him wealthy.
D. His careers were controversial.

Correct Answer: B

Explanation of Correct Answer: The correct answer is choice (B) His careers involved writing. Each of Dickey’s careers required him to use his writing skills on a daily basis. Choice (A) is incorrect because he enjoyed his positions at various universities. Choice (C) is incorrect because the text explains that Dickey left one job for a marketing career since he was barely making ends meet. Choice (D) is incorrect because it is a misunderstanding of the text. Dickey’s careers weren’t necessarily controversial, but many of his views were and he expressed those views through his writing.

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dickey’s movements from one career to the next influenced his expression as an author.</td>

</tbody>
</table>

Dickey’s teaching career supported his decision to adjust his path in order to attain success as a novelist.

Dickey’s educational experiences established his unconventional attitude toward advertising.

Dickey’s involvement in the wars resulted in him becoming an accomplished poet.

He enrolled in Clemson University in 1942 but dropped out just a few months later to join the Army Air Corps.

Upon returning from the war, Dickey completed his undergraduate degree and earned a master’s degree in English at Vanderbilt University.

The book’s success was a turning point for Dickey, according to The New Georgia Encyclopedia.

This is the correct response because the events of the passage interact to show that Dickey’s movements from one career to the next influenced his expression as an author. The passage states that Dickey was “a writer, a critic, a lecturer, and a teacher” as well as an advertising copywriter and a navigator in the Army Air Corps. Specifically, the text states that Dickey’s poetry “often focused on everyday subjects, from his wartime experiences to animals to football players.” His novel, Deliverance, told the “story of four Atlanta businessmen on a weekend canoe trip that ends in disaster.” The text also states that Dickey’s experience in the military provided him with “rich fodder for many of his poems, including one of his most famous, ‘The Firebombing.’” The reader must infer that the topic of this poem relates to his experiences as a navigator during the war. From Dickey’s published works that focus on everyday subjects, businessmen, and military imagery, the reader must infer that Dickey’s varied career influenced the topics he wrote about and how he expressed himself in his writing.

This section of the test assesses your skill to comprehend reading passages and use information from the passages to write an argumentative essay.

Before you begin writing your essay, you will read two passages.

As you read these passages, think about details you may use in an argumentative essay about cultural treasures being held in museums.

1. Bring Them Home
2. Museums Preserve the Cultures of the World
Bring Them Home

The magic of museums is that they transport visitors both back in time and across continents. Museums preserve some of the most priceless treasures in the world and give many people an opportunity to view wonders they would never otherwise have seen. However, take a moment to ponder how often these artifacts from around the globe come to reside in a museum far away from the country of their origin. Most often, museums acquire objects with full cooperation from the originating country, either accepting them as donations or purchasing them outright. In addition, many museums sponsor “traveling exhibits,” which means that they share their exhibits with other museums located all over the world. Unfortunately, however, there are a number of examples where museums acquired artifacts and other treasures that belong to another culture or country.

This is not to say that the museums intentionally stole these precious artifacts. In many cases, protecting the artifacts motivated the acquisition. For example, the stunning marble sculptures that once adorned the Parthenon temple in Greece were removed in the 1800s and transported to the British Museum to preserve them from further damage. The Turkish government, which then controlled Greece, gave permission for this undertaking. However, Greece has long since regained its independence and now has urgently petitioned the British Museum to return this historic art. Greece is eager to undertake the preservation of these priceless marble sculptures. In fact, a new Greek museum has a special room designed to house these statues in the hope that the country’s wishes and rights will be honored.

Like Greece, Egypt also wants to recover its historical treasures. The country is negotiating with France, England, Germany, the United States, and other countries for the return of priceless pieces of its history. In some cases, the archaeologists who discovered these treasures brought them to the museums. However, in many cases thieves looted tombs and warehouses, later selling their goods to museums. Egypt claims this happened, for example, to a historically priceless burial mask purchased by a museum in St. Louis.

Greece and Egypt are not alone in their quests. Many other countries, including China, Iran, India, and Turkey, are seeking the return of objects important to their cultures and histories. Since they now have the desire and capability to preserve their treasures, they argue that it is only right that they have the treasures themselves. It is impossible to ignore the power of these arguments. Whether these relics were taken for noble reasons, such as preserving them, or taken as spoils of war or colonialism, those countries currently in possession must make the moral decision to return these pieces of history to their rightful homes.

Nations petition museums regularly to return artifacts that once came from their lands. Sometimes museums agree that it is appropriate to return these items, but sometimes they do not agree. While right of ownership might seem always to belong to the country of origin, there are many legitimate reasons that a museum may decline such requests. Perhaps museum funds were used in the past to legally purchase an exhibit with the full cooperation of the native country at that time. A change in political power can motivate a “give me that back” attitude in a donor country. Perhaps the museum that houses ancient treasures is far better equipped to preserve them from destruction and deterioration. Most importantly, an excellent argument can be made that some treasures truly belong to all citizens of the world, not just to those in their country of origin.

Throughout the centuries, many priceless antiquities have been lost or severely damaged. The reasons for this often include the ravages of war, downright carelessness, and the erosion of time. For example, of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, only one, the Pyramids of Giza, survives today. Museums protect items of historical and cultural significance. Museum professionals are experts, trained in the best ways to preserve and restore ancient art and other relics, and they are dedicated to this mission. In the 1940s, one museum curator even risked his life as part of a World War II task force charged with the mission to protect historical monuments and works of art from the war.

It is this need to preserve these irreplaceable objects that most often prevents museums from returning them. For example, Germany still refuses to return the bust of Queen Nefertiti to Egypt because such a long trip could cause irreversible damage to the ancient treasure. In other cases, the stability of the original country calls into question its ability to protect artifacts.

Imagine a world where every country kept to itself all its ancient artifacts. The only way to experience these wonders would be to travel to each country. Most people do not have the money to do this. However, many national museums are free and others are relatively low cost. By housing important artifacts from a variety of cultures, museums around the world allow people everywhere to experience a taste of the history and art that helped to mold the world they live in today.

In order to promote this experience of a world culture, museums should be supported in their desire to retain treasures that they have gathered over time. Their curators and boards of directors can be trusted to make wise decisions about which artifacts to return and which ones to keep. These antiquities are part of a shared history that spans many countries. They should be placed where they will be safe, cared for, and enjoyed by millions.
WRITING TASK

Some people believe that museums must return cultural treasures to their country of origin if that country requests them, while other people believe that museums do sometimes have a right to deny those requests.

Consider the claims on BOTH sides of the debate. Write an argumentative essay in your own words supporting either side.

Be sure to use information from BOTH passages in your argumentative essay.

Writer’s Checklist

Be sure to:

- Introduce your claim.
- Support your claim with logical reasoning and relevant evidence, including facts and details, from the passages.
- Acknowledge and address alternate or opposing claims.
- Organize the reasons and evidence logically.
- Identify the passages by title or number when using details or facts directly from the passages.
- Develop your ideas clearly and use your own words, except when quoting directly from the passages.
- Use appropriate and varied transitions to connect your ideas and to clarify the relationships among claims, counterclaims, reasons, and evidence.
- Use clear language and vocabulary.
- Establish and maintain a formal style.
- Provide a conclusion that supports the argument presented.
- Check your work for correct usage, grammar, spelling, capitalization, and punctuation.

Now write your argumentative essay on your answer document. Refer to the Writer’s Checklist as you write and proofread your essay.
The following are examples of seven-point responses. See the seven-point, two-trait rubric for a text-based argumentative response on pages 72 and 73 to see why these examples would earn the maximum number of points.

There is no question that museums play a huge role in the preservation of our history. In fact, museums have been most important in spreading cultures and helping us grow as a species. The doubt arises when cultural treasures are housed outside of their original countries. To whom do these treasures rightfully belong, and how can they best be preserved for people?

If it is true that “most often, museums acquire objects with full cooperation from the originating country,” as stated in the article “Bring Them Home,” objects then become the rightful property of the museum and are best housed there for several reasons. Rightful ownership is the least of these legitimate reasons. If a house is purchased fairly, it would seem crazy for a previous owner to claim that the house should be returned to him or her simply because he or she has a history with the house. But there are more important reasons, beyond clear ownership, that museums should be allowed to retain legally acquired exhibits.

Museums were created for preservation. Professional curators are “trained in the best ways to preserve and restore ancient art and other relics,” according to the author of “Museums Preserve the Cultures of the World.” The expertise of these curators may prevent further deterioration or destruction of important exhibits. In a museum, pieces may be kept safe from the ravages of time and war and, most importantly, maintained for all to see.

History, whether it is Greek or Egyptian, is human history and belongs to everyone. Both articles reference treasures of Egypt that have been held in Germany and Britain for several generations. According to the first article, Egypt would like those artifacts back. Egyptians feel not only that the artifacts belong to them but also that Egypt is now in a good state to preserve those artifacts. Egyptians also claim that many of the artifacts are the spoils of tomb raiding rather than legitimate business transactions. This is all probably true, but the biggest question should be how to best preserve the artifacts for the most people to learn from them.

Though compensation should be made to people robbed of their treasures, the safekeeping of those treasures in well-maintained environments that offer opportunities for study to the largest number of people is the best place for these exhibits. Museums open to the public and dedicated to the preservation of humanity’s treasures will always be the best keepers of history.

OR

One of the most important pieces of preserving a culture’s history is in preserving artifacts that represent a culture and tell its story. Who better to preserve a culture’s history than the very culture that created it? I agree with the author of the first passage, “Bring Them Home,” that these precious treasures and artifacts belong with their countries of origin.

The first strong argument to support returning misplaced museum artifacts to their rightful owners is that many of the countries from which these artifacts have been taken are fully capable of preserving them on their own. The author of “Museums Preserve the Cultures of the World” states that it is the “need to preserve these irreplaceable objects that most often prevents museums from returning them.” But it is easy to counter that argument when there are many examples of countries that are capable of preserving these objects just as well as museums.
Example Items

The first passage provides a specific example of a country that is willing to do the work and preparation to preserve its rightful cultural artifacts. Greece has already prepared a “special room” in a new museum as it anticipates the return of these treasures. Egypt, China, and India are also countries that are willing and able to preserve their own cultural treasures. It is clear that it makes sense to return these artifacts to their homes.

Another powerful reason that countries should be allowed to house their own historic artifacts is that it would promote a stronger sense of culture within a country. The author of the second passage states that “most people do not have the money” to travel to many different countries to see these artifacts, so it makes sense to have them all in one place. But what about the people who live in the countries of origin? Shouldn’t they have the right to see and experience treasures that are a part of their own cultures? It seems morally right that the history of one’s home should be within reach for those who live there.

Preserving ancient artifacts is a delicate subject, but in the end, it is clear that these treasures belong with their rightful owners. All countries deserve to feel the pride and amazement that comes with understanding one’s past. Museums should be willing to return these items to their rightful owners. These treasures belong at home.

excerpt from One of Ours
by Willa Cather

1 THE CIRCUS was on Saturday. The next morning Claude was standing at his dresser, shaving. His beard was already strong, a shade darker than his hair and not so red as his skin. His eyebrows and long lashes were a pale corn-colour—made his blue eyes seem lighter than they were, and, he thought, gave a look of shyness and weakness to the upper part of his face. He was exactly the sort of looking boy he didn’t want to be. He especially hated his head,—so big that he had trouble in buying his hats, and uncompromisingly square in shape; a perfect block-head. His name was another source of humiliation. Claude: it was a “chump” name, like Elmer and Roy; a hayseed name trying to be fine. In country schools there was always a red-headed, warty-handed, runny-nosed little boy who was called Claude. His good physique he took for granted; smooth, muscular arms and legs, and strong shoulders, a farmer boy might be supposed to have. Unfortunately he had none of his father’s physical repose, and his strength often asserted itself inharmoniously. The storms that went on in his mind sometimes made him rise, or sit down, or lift something, more violently than there was any apparent reason for his doing.

2 The household slept late on Sunday morning; even Mahailey did not get up until seven. The general signal for breakfast was the smell of doughnuts frying. This morning Ralph rolled out of bed at the last minute and callously put on his clean underwear without taking a bath. This cost him not one regret, though he took time to polish his new oxblood shoes tenderly with a pocket handkerchief. He reached the table when all the others were half through breakfast, and made his peace by genially asking his mother if she didn’t want him to drive her to church in the car.

3 “I’d like to go if I can get the work done in time,” she said, doubtfully glancing at the clock.

4 “Can’t Mahailey tend to things for you this morning?”

5 Mrs. Wheeler hesitated. “Everything but the separator, she can. But she can’t fit all the parts together. It’s a good deal of work, you know.”

6 “Now, Mother,” said Ralph good-humouredly, as he emptied the syrup pitcher over his cakes, “you’re prejudiced. Nobody ever thinks of skimming milk now-a-days. Every up-to-date farmer uses a separator.”
7 Mrs. Wheeler’s pale eyes twinkled. “Mahailey and I will never be quite up-to-date, Ralph. We’re old-fashioned, and I don’t know but you’d better let us be. I could see the advantage of a separator if we milked half-a-dozen cows. It’s a very ingenious machine. But it’s a great deal more work to scald it and fit it together than it was to take care of the milk in the old way.”

8 “It won’t be when you get used to it,” Ralph assured her. He was the chief mechanic of the Wheeler farm, and when the farm implements and the automobiles did not give him enough to do, he went to town and bought machines for the house. As soon as Mahailey got used to a washing-machine or a churn, Ralph, to keep up with the bristling march of invention, brought home a still newer one. The mechanical dish-washer she had never been able to use, and patent flat-irons and oil-stoves drove her wild.

9 Claude told his mother to go upstairs and dress; he would scald the separator while Ralph got the car ready. He was still working at it when his brother came in from the garage to wash his hands.

10 “You really oughtn’t to load mother up with things like this, Ralph,” he exclaimed fretfully. “Did you ever try washing this . . . thing yourself?”

11 “Of course I have. If Mrs. Dawson can manage it, I should think mother could.”

12 “Mrs. Dawson is a younger woman. Anyhow, there’s no point in trying to make machinists of Mahailey and mother.”

13 Ralph lifted his eyebrows to excuse Claude’s bluntness. “See here,” he said persuasively, “don’t you go encouraging her into thinking she can’t change her ways. Mother’s entitled to all the labour-saving devices we can get her.”

14 Claude rattled the thirty-odd graduated metal funnels which he was trying to fit together in their proper sequence. “Well, if this is labour-saving—”

15 The younger boy giggled and ran upstairs for his panama hat. He never quarrelled. Mrs. Wheeler sometimes said it was wonderful, how much Ralph would take from Claude.

16 After Ralph and his mother had gone off in the car, Mr. Wheeler drove to see his German neighbour, Gus Yoeder, who had just bought a blooded bull. Dan and Jerry were pitching horseshoes down behind the barn. Claude told Mahailey he was going to the cellar to put up the swinging shelf she had been wanting, so that the rats couldn’t get at her vegetables.

17 “Thank you, Mr. Claude. I don’t know what does make the rats so bad. The cats catches one most every day, too.”

18 “I guess they come up from the barn. I’ve got a nice wide board down at the garage for your shelf.”
Additional Sample Items

19 The cellar was cemented, cool and dry, with deep closets for canned fruit and flour and groceries, bins for coal and cobs, and a dark-room full of photographer’s apparatus. Claude took his place at the carpenter’s bench under one of the square windows. Mysterious objects stood about him in the grey twilight; electric batteries, old bicycles and typewriters, a machine for making cement fence-posts, a vulcanizer, a stereopticon with a broken lens. The mechanical toys Ralph could not operate successfully, as well as those he had got tired of, were stored away here. If they were left in the barn, Mr. Wheeler saw them too often, and sometimes, when they happened to be in his way, he made sarcastic comments. Claude had begged his mother to let him pile this lumber into a wagon and dump it into some washout hole along the creek; but Mrs. Wheeler said he must not think of such a thing; it would hurt Ralph’s feelings. Nearly every time Claude went into the cellar, he made a desperate resolve to clear the place out some day, reflecting bitterly that the money this wreckage cost would have put a boy through college decently.

However, take a moment to ponder how often these artifacts from around the globe come to reside in a museum far away from the country of their origin. Most often, museums acquire objects with full cooperation from the originating country, either accepting them as donations or purchasing them outright. In addition, many museums sponsor “traveling exhibits,” which means that they share their exhibits with other museums located all over the world. Unfortunately, however, there are a number of examples where museums acquired artifacts and other treasures that belong to another culture or country.

This is not to say that the museums intentionally stole these precious artifacts. In many cases, protecting the artifacts motivated the acquisition. For example, the stunning marble sculptures that once adorned the Parthenon temple in Greece were removed in the 1800s and transported to the British Museum to preserve them from further damage. The Turkish government, which then controlled Greece, gave permission for this undertaking. However, Greece has long since regained its independence and now has urgently petitioned the British Museum to return this historic art. Greece is eager to undertake the preservation of these priceless marble sculptures. In fact, a new Greek museum has a special room designed to house these statues in the hope that the country’s wishes and rights will be honored.

Like Greece, Egypt also wants to recover its historical treasures. The country is negotiating with France, England, Germany, the United States, and other countries for the return of priceless pieces of its history. In some cases, the archaeologists who discovered these treasures brought them to the museums. However, in many cases thieves looted tombs and warehouses, later selling their goods to museums. Egypt claims this happened, for example, to a historically priceless burial mask purchased by a museum in St. Louis.

Greece and Egypt are not alone in their quests. Many other countries, including China, Iran, India, and Turkey, are seeking the return of objects important to their cultures and histories. Since they now have the desire and capability to preserve their treasures, they argue that it is only right that they have the treasures themselves. It is impossible to ignore the power of these arguments. Whether these relics were taken for noble reasons, such as preserving them, or taken as spoils of war or colonialism, those countries currently in possession must make the moral decision to return these pieces of history to their rightful homes.

Nations petition museums regularly to return artifacts that once came from their lands. Sometimes museums agree that it is appropriate to return these items, but sometimes they do not agree. While right of ownership might seem always to belong to the country of origin, there are many legitimate reasons that a museum may decline such requests. Perhaps museum funds were used in the past to legally purchase an exhibit with the full cooperation of the native country at that time. A change in political power can motivate a “give me that back” attitude in a donor country. Perhaps the museum that houses ancient treasures is far better equipped to preserve them from destruction and deterioration. Most importantly, an excellent argument can be made that some treasures truly belong to all citizens of the world, not just to those in their country of origin.

Throughout the centuries, many priceless antiquities have been lost or severely damaged. The reasons for this often include the ravages of war, downright carelessness, and the erosion of time. For example, of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, only one, the Pyramids of Giza, survives today. Museums protect items of historical and cultural significance. Museum professionals are experts, trained in the best ways to preserve and restore ancient art and other relics, and they are dedicated to this mission. In the 1940s, one museum curator even risked his life as part of a World War II task force charged with the mission to protect historical monuments and works of art from the war.

It is this need to preserve these irreplaceable objects that most often prevents museums from returning them. For example, Germany still refuses to return the bust of Queen Nefertiti to Egypt because such a long trip could cause irreversible damage to the ancient treasure. In other cases, the stability of the original country calls into question its ability to protect artifacts.

Imagine a world where every country kept to itself all its ancient artifacts. The only way to experience these wonders would be to travel to each country. Most people do not have the money to do this. However, many national museums are free and others are relatively low cost. By housing important artifacts from a variety of cultures, museums around the world allow people everywhere to experience a taste of the history and art that helped to mold the world they live in today.

In order to promote this experience of a world culture, museums should be supported in their desire to retain treasures that they have gathered over time. Their curators and boards of directors can be trusted to make wise decisions about which artifacts to return and which ones to keep. These antiquities are part of a shared history that spans many countries. They should be placed where they will be safe, cared for, and enjoyed by millions.

Read this paragraph that a student wrote as part of a paper for history class.

> The Panama Canal remains one of the greatest inventions in the history of the world. Until its completion in 1914, only one long, arduous route existed for ships traveling between the east and west coasts of the United States. The ships had to sail down to the southern-most tip of South America, around the tip of Cape Horn, and then back up the western coast of the continent. When the Panama Canal was built, it gave ships a route through the middle of Panama in Central America. This mind-blowing new route was way less intense and made the ships' voyages approximately 8,000 nautical miles shorter.

Which sentence should the student revise to make it more appropriate for the audience and purpose?

B. sentence 3

A student is writing an essay for an American literature class. Read the draft of a paragraph from the essay.

> Zora Neale Hurston was an American writer whose work often portrayed the culture of African Americans living in small towns in the southern United States. She is perhaps best known for her novels Their Eyes Were Watching God (1937) and Tell My Horse (1938) as well as her stunning autobiography, Dust Tracks on a Road (1942). Hurston was also a college professor and enjoyed a fruitful career as a writer, but as she grew older, much of her work seemed to be forgotten. In the late twentieth century—a number of decades after her death in 1960—her work became popular once again and her readership dramatically increased. The thematic importance of her literary contributions was once again recognized.

Which research question would BEST help further develop the student’s topic?

A. What did Hurston study as an undergraduate in college?
B. Which themes is Hurston best known for exploring in her work?
C. What are some common causes of an increase in readership of an author’s work?

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Mrs. Wheeler is resistant to change.&quot;</td>
<td>&quot;We’re old fashioned, and I don’t know but you’d better let us be.&quot;</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Inference:

- Mrs. Wheeler is intrigued by innovation.
- Mrs. Wheeler persists in efforts to master new equipment.
- Mrs. Wheeler prioritizes social interaction over completing chores.

Support for Inference:

- "I’d like to go if I can get the work done in time," she said, doubtfully glancing at the clock.
- "It’s a good deal of work, you know."
- "It’s a very ingenious machine."

In the first column, “Mrs. Wheeler is resistant to change.” is the correct response because the events and dialogue throughout the passage support this inference. Mrs. Wheeler steadfastly clings to her outdated ways of doing things even though Ralph has introduced her to equipment that would most likely save her time and energy. In the second column, “We’re old fashioned, and I don’t know but you’d better let us be.” is the correct response. This piece of dialogue provides the best support for the inference because it shows how loyal Mrs. Wheeler is to her own methods of completing farm chores.

<td>“Doughnuts are ready!” Mahailey is calling from the kitchen. I can’t believe that it is time to get up already, I think as I tug on the blue thermal blanket draped across the foot of my bed. In my hurry to go to bed last night, I must have left my bedroom window open. I have to get up and close that window, but I sure wish that there were some way to do that task from the warmth of my bed. Maybe I will just invent self-closing windows. I am sure there are many lazy people like me who don’t want to leave the warmth of their beds. This could be the ticket to a bright future for me, a future that does not involve milking cows or repairing farm implements. I hear thumping sounds coming from Claude’s bedroom next door. That brother of mine certainly wants to prevent anybody from sleeping. Clumsy Claude! Last night at the circus, he bolted from his seat just as my friend Cecil was walking down the aisle with a bag of buttered popcorn. Claude collided with Cecil, creating a popcorn shower over the people sitting nearby. Carolyn Jones, Cecil’s fifteen-year-old cousin who is visiting from Augusta, had popcorn stuck in her curly brown hair. <td>I think the author of the first article does the best job of using style and content to support his purpose. In the first place, this author is the most fair. He does not try to prove that museums just steal other countries’ treasures. Instead, he takes a very reasonable approach and focuses on those cases where a country really should have the right to take back their property. His example of the marble sculptures that were taken from Greece when it was under Turkish rule and placed in a British museum is very persuasive. Of course these sculptures should be returned to Greece if Greece wants them back! All the way through this article, the author’s style is logical, calm, and fair. The author of the second article has a condescending style when he writes about how “expert” museum workers take better care of artifacts than people in the country where the artifacts came from can. That makes it sound like the home country has no experts and no real right to its own history. OR The style and content in the second article is by far the most effective. The author of the second article uses a formal style in presenting his or her argument, which is more effective for the purpose of the article. The author uses this formal style to present the strong argument that preserving ancient treasures is so important that we cannot afford to risk their loss. The author argues over and over again that museums have a very special and important role: they are protectors. They protect artifacts from war, from being eroded by time, and sometimes even from unstable countries that aren’t equipped to take care of them. I think the author’s style is very powerful while still being formal when he or she says, “These antiquities are part of a shared history that spans many countries. They should be placed where they will be safe, cared for, and enjoyed by millions.” On the other hand, the author of the first article uses a less formal style in his or her writing, which seems to weaken the argument. For example, the first sentence in the article states, “The magic of museums is that they transport visitors both back in time and across continents.” This sentence may capture the attention of readers, but using the word “magic” makes the argument seem less credible. The author does provide some strong examples for the argument that artifacts should be returned to their “rightful homes,” but it is more about appealing to the emotions than citing solid facts and evidence. For these reasons, I believe the second article has the most effective style and content. I think countries and people need to remember that no one can really own objects that are so important to everyone around the world.</td>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>I think the second author’s article is the most convincing because he shows how many reasons there are that a museum might need to hold on to artifacts that it bought and cares about saving. The first article just makes the whole problem too simple.</td>

<td>The purpose of both authors is to have the readers agree with them.</td>

Item 13

The following are examples of seven-point responses. See the seven-point, two-trait rubric for a text-based argumentative response on pages 72 and 73 to see why these examples would earn the maximum number of points.

There is no question that museums play a huge role in the preservation of our history. In fact, museums have been most important in spreading cultures and helping us grow as a species. The doubt arises when cultural treasures are housed outside of their original countries. To whom do these treasures rightfully belong, and how can they best be preserved for people?

If it is true that “most often, museums acquire objects with full cooperation from the originating country,” as stated in the article “Bring Them Home,” objects then become the rightful property of the museum and are best housed there for several reasons. Rightful ownership is the least of these legitimate reasons. If a house is purchased fairly, it would seem crazy for a previous owner to claim that the house should be returned to him or her simply because he or she has a history with the house. But there are more important reasons, beyond clear ownership, that museums should be allowed to retain legally acquired exhibits.

Museums were created for preservation. Professional curators are “trained in the best ways to preserve and restore ancient art and other relics,” according to the author of “Museums Preserve the Cultures of the World.” The expertise of these curators may prevent further deterioration or destruction of important exhibits. In a museum, pieces may be kept safe from the ravages of time and war and, most importantly, maintained for all to see.

History, whether it is Greek or Egyptian, is human history and belongs to everyone. Both articles reference treasures of Egypt that have been held in Germany and Britain for several generations. According to the first article, Egypt would like those artifacts back. Egyptians feel not only that the artifacts belong to them but also that Egypt is now in a good state to preserve those artifacts. Egyptians also claim that many of the artifacts are the spoils of tomb raiding rather than legitimate business transactions. This is all probably true, but the biggest question should be how to best preserve the artifacts for the most people to learn from them.

Though compensation should be made to people robbed of their treasures, the safekeeping of those treasures in well-maintained environments that offer opportunities for study to the largest number of people is the best place for these exhibits. Museums open to the public and dedicated to the preservation of humanity’s treasures will always be the best keepers of history.

OR

One of the most important pieces of preserving a culture’s history is in preserving artifacts that represent a culture and tell its story. Who better to preserve a culture’s history than the very culture that created it? I agree with the author of the first passage, “Bring Them Home,” that these precious treasures and artifacts belong with their countries of origin.

The first strong argument to support returning misplaced museum artifacts to their rightful owners is that many of the countries from which these artifacts have been taken are fully capable of preserving them on their own. The author of “Museums Preserve the Cultures of the World” states that it is the “need to preserve these irreplaceable objects that most often prevents museums from returning them.” But it is easy to counter that argument when there are many examples of countries that are capable of preserving these objects just as well as museums.

Go on to the next page to finish item 13.
Additional Sample Items

The first passage provides a specific example of a country that is willing to do the work and preparation to preserve its rightful cultural artifacts. Greece has already prepared a “special room” in a new museum as it anticipates the return of these treasures. Egypt, China, and India are also countries that are willing and able to preserve their own cultural treasures. It is clear that it makes sense to return these artifacts to their homes.

Another powerful reason that countries should be allowed to house their own historic artifacts is that it would promote a stronger sense of culture within a country. The author of the second passage states that “most people do not have the money” to travel to many different countries to see these artifacts, so it makes sense to have them all in one place. But what about the people who live in the countries of origin? Shouldn’t they have the right to see and experience treasures that are a part of their own cultures? It seems morally right that the history of one’s home should be within reach for those who live there.

Preserving ancient artifacts is a delicate subject, but in the end, it is clear that these treasures belong with their rightful owners. All countries deserve to feel the pride and amazement that comes with understanding one’s past. Museums should be willing to return these items to their rightful owners. These treasures belong at home.

Exemplar Response

The highest mountain in Georgia is Brasstown Bald, which is in the Blue Ridge Mountain range. The peak rises to 4,784 feet and is located above the only cloud forest in Georgia. A cloud forest is a tropical or subtropical forest characterized by heavy rainfall and some really lasting low clouds. The trees in the cloud forest consist of birch, oak, willow, and others. Brasstown Bald features an observation tower with amazing views and several trails along which hikers may see bears, bobcats, and deer.

In the first drop-down menu, the correct response is “persistent low-level clouds.” This is the correct response because, out of the three options, it utilizes the most scientifically accurate language to describe the clouds in order to maintain the formal language necessary for an informative essay. In the second drop-down menu, the correct response is “an observation tower.” This is the correct response because “observation tower” provides the most accurate and precise description of the viewing place. The casual language used in other options, such as “totally is cool” and “super-tall,” would not support an essay using formal style.

Research shows the Sahara Desert has been expanding for decades.
The Great Green Wall stretches across countries in northern Africa.
Poor land management can contribute to the spread of deserts.

The correct responses are “A recent scientific journal reports that planting trees can help reduce dangerous carbon emissions.” and “Some of the trees being planted are fruit trees, which provide a source of food.” These responses provide the most relevant evidence to support Nora’s claim that the Great Green Wall of Africa will benefit both Africans and the environment. The first response references research that indicates the presence of trees can contribute to a healthier environment. The second response provides an example of how the types of trees planted in the Great Green Wall can support the health of people. NOTE: The response order within the box does not matter.

Exemplar Response

Because purchasing items online has become so [popular, traditional] shopping malls are in danger of becoming an antiquated part of society. The boom in online shopping is [jeopardizing] the viability of shopping malls that have served as a primary option for those looking to purchase anything from clothing to electronics. According to a business study by [Tarkin Research Center], malls in Georgia have reported decreases in profits and customer foot traffic. Malls are employing different tactics to reinvigorate business—innovative sales promotions, diverse retail options, and [reduced-cost items in storefronts].

In the first drop-down menu, the correct response is “popular, traditional” because the introductory dependent clause (“Because purchasing items online has become so popular,”) requires a comma before joining with the independent clause in the sentence (“traditional shopping malls are in danger of becoming an antiquated part of society.”). In the second drop-down menu, the correct response is “jeopardizing” because this is the only acceptable correct spelling of the word. In the third drop-down menu, the correct response is “Tarkin Research Center” because the name of this organization is a proper noun and convention rules call for proper nouns to be capitalized. In the fourth drop-down menu, the correct response is “reduced-cost items in storefronts” because compound adjectives are generally hyphenated when they come before the noun they are describing. While some compound nouns do include hyphens, such as “mother-in-law,” the word “storefront” is a compound noun that does not require a hyphen.
WRITING RUBRICS

American Literature and Composition items that are not machine-scored, i.e., constructed-response, extended constructed-response, and extended writing-response items, are manually scored using either a holistic rubric or a two-trait rubric.

Four-Point Holistic Rubric

Genre: Narrative

A holistic rubric essentially has one main trait. On the Georgia Milestones End-of-Course assessment, a holistic rubric contains a single point scale ranging from zero to four. Each point value represents a qualitative description of the student’s work. To score an item on a holistic rubric, a scorer or reader need only choose the criteria and associated point value that best represents the student’s work. Increasing point values represent a greater understanding of the content and, thus, a higher score.

Seven-Point, Two-Trait Rubric

Genre: Argumentative or Informational/Explanatory

A two-trait rubric, on the other hand, evaluates two major traits, which are conventions and ideas. On the Georgia Milestones EOC assessment, a two-trait rubric contains two scales, one for each trait, ranging from zero to four on one scale (ideas) and zero to three on the other (conventions). A score is given for each of the two traits, for a total of seven possible points for the item. To score an item on a two-trait rubric, a scorer must choose for each trait the criteria and associated point value that best represents the student’s work. The two scores are added together. Increasing point values represent a greater understanding of the content and, thus, a higher score.

On the following pages are the rubrics that will be used to evaluate writing on the Georgia Milestones American Literature and Composition EOC assessment.

Students are responsible for language conventions learned in their current grade as well as in prior grades. Refer to the language skills for each grade to determine the grade-level expectations for grammar, syntax, capitalization, punctuation, and spelling. Also refer to the “Language Progressive Skills, by Grade” chart in the Appendix for those standards that need continued attention beyond the grade in which they were introduced.
