

Good afternoon world language professionals!

Let me take a moment with this update to express our congratulations to all of Georgia's 2018 Graduates! We are so proud of you for accomplishing this goal and it is an important milestone in your educational and professional life. As educators, this is also a busy time of the year when we not only join in celebrating the accomplishments our senior students and all the events around graduation, finish up exams and reflect on the year and yes, even begin to think about the next school year or about finally finishing those projects in our professional and personal lives that we have been too busy to attend to. I want to personally thank all of Georgia's wonderful world language educators, district coordinators and administrators for the outstanding year we have had together in world language education. Our work is meaningful, of growing importance in so many ways and I know for many of us, a labor of love. Paulo Freire, a Brazilian born Educator and Philosopher once said, "Education is an act of love, and thus an act of courage." Your courage and your love for your students is evident for all to see and I wish you all a wonderful and successful end to the school year.

A Reminder: These updates are archived on the bottom of our professional development page here and the calendar has been updated below.

- Looking for a job? – Be sure to check out our openings listed below.

- Congratulations as well to Mrs. Allison Kerley Townsend from Fulton County Schools for being named the 2019 Georgia Teacher of the Year!

More than seven billion people live in nearly 200 countries and speak roughly 7,000 languages. Country-specific laws and business practices combine with these languages and dialects to create hundreds of locales, each a unique blend that requires linguistic, cultural, business, and other adaptations. This is the eco-system in which work is done in the realms of business, education and government. Last year, the languages services market reached 43 billion dollars in revenue as the need to find linguistically and culturally talented workers continues to rise. Strategically, the new CIA Director, in her remarks before the confirmation committee, was very direct in stating the needs of her organization related to foreign language skills. As Georgia's Port continues to break records for April moving 356,700 twenty-foot equivalent container, an increase of 7.1 percent and in order to strengthen the Port of Savannah's ability to support the state's future economic growth, the GPA Board approved $66 million in terminal upgrades, including $24 million for the purchase of 10 additional rubber-tired gantry cranes. A recent study suggesting that 1 of every 11 Georgia jobs are tied to the ports of Savannah and Brunswick. Georgia's global arms continue to expand and recently, Amazon's VP of its FBA service reported that "In 2017, sales by small and medium businesses who sell globally grew at more than 50 percent, and that is twice the rate of domestic-only sellers." This is one reason why US Senator Isakson calls Africa the most important continent in the 21st century for our country. Facebook's CEO Mark Zuckerberg certainly understands the value of language in reaching new markets and Facebook, like many online platforms, continue to seek ways to expand into new languages and markets. Recently, Swahili became the first

African language on Twitter. Whether it is the digital marketplace or the physical marketplace, the government or the private sector, everywhere we turn we see the need for language skills. Georgia's tourism industry generated a record-breaking \$63.1 billion in economic impact in 2017, for an increase of 3.8 percent over last year, according to the U.S. Travel Association and Tourism Economics. At this month's Global Language Leadership Meeting sponsored by CULTR, Mrs. Seema Jain, the Director of Multicultural Affairs for Marriott International, reiterated the need for the hospitality industry to become more culturally and linguistically adept at making their customers feel at home and how this translates into increasing a company's bottom line. According to the Metro Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, international investment in the metro Atlanta area remains strong. Beyond the obvious economic and strategic reasons to support language learning, there is ever increasing research to support the cognitive and academic benefits of learning languages. For some of those, see our links at the bottom of the update.

And these are just some of the highlights pulled from the last two weeks of news items related to the work we do as world language teachers. The world is full of languages, cultures and opportunities.

Spotlight on teachers!

- Douglas County High School names IB Spanish teacher Giannina Gotuzzo as teacher of the year.

Giannina Gotuzzo has been teaching Spanish at Douglas County high school for the last 9 years. Each year her students successfully navigate foreign language competitions like West Metro and FLAG. Every year for the last seven years she has had a student participate in GHP for Spanish. Her students are very successful on their International Baccalaureate exams every year in both SL and HL often beating international averages. Her colleagues describe her as a high energy, fun loving teacher who encourages and motivates all who surround her. She works tirelessly to help her students in all of their endeavors. She co-coordinates the International Skills Diploma Seal. She is an active participant in local and state professional development. She attends Spanish Immersion Camp with her students each year. Her students adore her and work diligently to make her proud. She certainly represents what is best about Douglas County high school.

- It was a great honor to welcome the World Language Educators of the Month and the teachers of the year from Georgia's language teacher professional associations (AATG, GCLE, AATSP, AATF and GCA) to the Georgia Department of Education to be recognized for their achievements! Thank You Teachers! Those honored included:
