The Center for Leadership in Disability (CLD) serves as a bridge between University and community in support of evidence-based practices designed to make improvements for people with disabilities and their families. The CLD educates current and future professionals, develops and promotes innovative and effective systems changes, conducts evidence-based research, and disseminates information.

Our mission is to translate research into sustainable community practices that contribute to independent, self-determined, inclusive, and productive lives. We accomplish this by partnering with individuals with developmental disabilities and their families, developing and promoting innovative and effective system changes.
