- How much can I afford?

Where Do I Want To Live?

POST-SCHOOL LIVING OPPORTUNITIES

Graduating from school and facing changing residential options can be frightening for the student and for the family. Traditionally, this fear is well known for all students but particularly so for students with disabilities. As individuals with disabilities become more empowered and develop more independence, self-advocacy and self-determination skills, transitioning from high school to adult life is not as overwhelming to the student as it was in previous decades. Students with disabilities are now realizing their hopes and dreams and are becoming increasingly independent.

Factors to consider in choosing a housing option:

- How much can I afford?
- Is the neighborhood safe?
- If I share my living space, will my housemate or roommate be compatible?
- Is the house, apartment or room in good condition?
- Will transportation to shopping and/or work be a problem?
- How much support will I need to carry out everyday activities?

Options for Community Living Opportunities and Supports

The agencies that provide support will evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the student, identify needs and implement a program to remediate deficits, prepare him/her to move to the next higher level of independence, and monitor his /her actions and development. This approach based on assessing readiness will determine when the person would exit one environment and move to the next. This focus is on a person's development instead of environmental accommodations for access.

The Person Centered Approach

Using the Person Centered Approach to identify a system of supports for community living options would provide a refreshing change in the mindset and perception of individuals with disabilities. The agency's role would be to provide this system of supports that would last for as long as they are needed in order to enable the student to successfully live in a home or apartment of his/her own in the community while gaining more competence, control, and confidence with activities in life that are meaningful to him/her. There are many options for living. Whether they include living independently in an apartment, or with friends, choosing to stay at home or living in an apartment in the home, they need to be designed with the student's interests and personal needs in mind.

For individuals receiving supports through Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disability (DBHDD). Georgia has recently developed a standardized Individual Support Plan (ISP) that incorporates person centered planning into the process. The individual and those who know the individual best participate in the planning process. The support plan that is developed builds on the needs and preferences of the individual with the goal of assisting him/her in living a meaningful and satisfying life. The plan also addresses significant issues regarding a person's health, safety, finances, and behavior. The ISP team considers the risks, aligns the supports to minimize risks, and revises the ISP as needs change. The plan encompasses many options for living whether they include independence in an apartment, or with friends, choosing to stay at home or living in an apartment in the home. The plan needs to be designed with the person's interests and personal needs in mind. The supports may include the natural support network and paid supports.

COMP & NOW Waiver Summary

This is Georgia's first waiver that began in 1989 and currently serves the most consumers. It provides individual fee-for-service reimbursement for an array of eleven different services that support people in the community. These supports range from providing twenty-four hour residential and day program services to periodic intermittent services such as respite. Waiver services also include reimbursement for environmental and vehicle modifications as well as medical equipment and supplies.

There are currently a large number of providers for the COMP & NOW because they are often small organizations that only provide single services. COMP & NOW providers may deliver a single service but are not prohibited from providing several or all of the services. Medical, dental, clinic outpatient, and pharmacy services are not included in this Waiver.

Residential Services

- 1. Residential Training and Supervision (RTS) Services - These services include a range of interventions with a particular focus on training and support in one or more of the following areas: eating, drinking, toileting, personal grooming and health care, dressing, communication, interpersonal relationships, mobility, home management, and use of leisure time. Services are offered twenty-four hours a day. Recipients live in small group settings.
- 2. Personal Support (PS) Services - These services include a wide range of interventions with a particular focus on training or support in one or more of the following areas: eating, drinking, toileting, personal grooming and health care, dressing, communication, interpersonal relationships, mobility, home management, and use of leisure time. Services are offered on an hourly basis for up to 24-hours each day. Recipients live in their own home, a foster home, or may choose to have one or two housemates.
- 3. Natural Support Enhancement (NSE) Services - This service is designed to give consumers assistance in developing and strengthening the skills necessary to live more independently in the community. Services are targeted for people whom currently live or desire to live in the community and have access to a natural support system. Reimbursement is based on services and supports identified in the approved Natural Support plan.

Centers for Independent Living (CILs)

Centers for Independent Living (CILs) are nonresidential places of action and coalition, where persons with disabilities learn empowerment and develop the skills necessary to make choices. Centers provide services and advocacy to promote the leadership, independence, and productivity of people with disabilities. Centers work with individuals as well as with local communities to remove barriers to independence and ensure equality of persons with disabilities (Department of Rehabilitative Services, 2003). The foundation of these services is the peer-to-peer relationship, in which people with disabilities act as mentors for other people with disabilities, showing them by example how to help themselves and to live independently. The core services that CILs provide are:

- Individual Advocacy and Systems Advocacy
- Peer Counseling
- Information and Referral
- Independent Living Skills Training

Other services that may be provided by a CIL include:

- Assistance in finding and obtaining accessible housing
- Financial Benefits Counseling
- Equipment Loan and/or Repair
- Personal Assistance Services
- Services related to Identifying, Hiring, Training and Firing a Personal Assistant
- Employment Readiness Services
- Mobility Training
